What's Happening...

First, a thank you for your patience during the construction that has us setting up our office and classroom in the parish hall. After the holiday break, we should be able to get back into our offices downstairs. Follow us on social media for the latest information.

Thanks to the efforts of Marie Henehan, there is a new, free ESL class on Block Island. The class is on Tuesdays at 6:00 p.m. at the Island Free Library. Marie comes to us with a lot of experience and education concerning English language learners. Most importantly, she brings enthusiasm and a can-do attitude. We are very excited to be working with her and to have a literacy program return to Block Island.

Tutor Tips

In our last newsletter, we emphasized the characteristics of the adult learner and how much we have in common with our students.

Remember? This time, I'd like to explore another component of successful learning -- the context or environment, both physical and atmospheric, in which you tutor.

Physical: You probably give little thought to our physical space and the accommodations we make for adult learners. Even though our physical space at LVWC has been in a state of flux these past months (!), we try to make wherever you meet comfortable. For meeting in person, we set up tables rather than desks in rows to facilitate learning in tutor/student pairs. This configuration is a reminder we are student-centered and not a traditional "school" with mass-produced lesson plans or tests (definite stressors for most adults!). If you're meeting online, we try to give as much tech coaching as you want to make the most of your Zoom/Facetime/other online sessions. The coffee/tea/cocoa pot is a reminder that we serve adults.

You and we make adjustments for eyesight (bigger fonts?), hearing (reducing background noise by distancing when in person or turning up the volume when on the iPad), mobility (handicap parking), temperature (cool in summer, heat in

"I've learned that people will forget what you said and people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel." Maya Angelou winter, air purifiers and open windows). Although we don't at the moment have access to our usual bookshelves, Theresa has made available on our website updated resources to provide rich visuals to support your tutoring. Go exploring and you'll find everything from pronunciation analysis and conversation scripts to citizenship materials. There are lots of opportunities to hear English and practice speaking online.

Atmospheric: The atmosphere you and we create is as important as the physical adjustments we make to accommodate our adult learners. You appreciate how courageous adult students are to set foot into our space or go online and embark on improving their English. They are stepping into the unknown. You greet them warmly and give them your undivided attention. You meet them at their level. Thank goodness for phone translators! You adjust your sessions to address their goals, even when that is ambiguous or frustratingly hard to quantify.

The atmosphere you create is respectful. Your flexibility and patience show in how you actively listen to your student. Students, over time, hopefully relax a bit at every session and become more receptive to learning. They become reassured that they are safe to practice English usage and make mistakes. At the same time, you continually tweak the balance of this supportive environment with enough challenges to engage your student. Even the time of day or the length of your session matter.

The context in which you tutor is a crucial part of successful language fluency. Your physical surroundings and the atmosphere you create are subtle but important factors in adult student learning. If you have any suggestions on how we can improve the learning environment at LVWC, please let us know.

May your winter be merry and bright!

Barbara Heuer 😊

American Hands-on Learning with Susan Besse
by Samuel R.
Adiprabowo & Ester
Handayani

We walked in some parks, a lot of parks, some of them are woods, talked about life, hobbies, family, and everything. Sometimes we came to Susan's house for lunch.

We did sport sailing in Newport at summer season. Because of Susan, I am interested in sailing, and then I took a sailing course (sailing class) this fall. I'm happy to do that.

We have been meeting Susan several times both in-person or on zoom. She made time for us. We did once a week but, due to my schedule during Fall semester, we changed to at least twice a month. These meetings also directly improve my English skills especially for how to communicate and talk with native English speakers. Furthermore, we are happy for being her friend. I hope, we can keep this friendship when we head had back to our country.

Again, thanks Susan for being our friend!
Sam & Ester from Indonesia

Sam was an international student at URI. He and his wife, Ester, have been working with Susan Besse since March 2021. Sam has finished his program, and he and his wife are heading back home at the end of the year.
